How To Teach Your Kids To Be Safe Online

Ensuring the safety of children from online threats such as cyberbullying, exposure to inappropriate content, and interactions with possibly dangerous people is your responsibility as a parent.

By teaching your kids about safe online practices, installing privacy settings, and monitoring your child's internet usage, you can empower them to navigate the online world safely and responsibly. And you'll receive peace of mind as well.

Steps to give your child a positive online experience:

☐ Enable parental control settings on all devices to help avoid inappropriate content and manage screen time.

☐ Teach your child the importance of responsible internet use and the risks of sharing personal information online.

☐ Be sure to keep your devices' operating systems and applications up to date.

☐ Show your child how to be responsible and respectful while interacting with others online.

☐ Share clear guidelines and rules for using devices, reading and viewing content, app downloads, and online communication.
