

Spot A Scam

A scam is when a product or opportunity appears truthful but is actually designed to take your money or personal information without providing any benefit in return.

Online scams—or false offers—targeting adults have risen in recent times. Ranging from identity theft to financial fraud, scams are widespread and threaten your security, potentially leading to losses or stolen identity. Therefore, it is essential to stay aware and be informed.

How to recognize a scam

1

Be careful of unwanted messages, emails, or calls asking for personal or financial information and passwords.

2

Decline offers or people that promise large amounts of money or rewards for minimal effort or investment are almost always scams.

3

Always be aware of high-pressure demands that require you to act quickly.

4

Watch out for offers or prizes that seem too good to be true. Requests for personal information or banking information often follow them.
